

In order to update employee constraints the HR manager or the employee itself will first have to open the Employee-Management-Menu and then choose whether to add or remove constraints. Both these processes run in a similar fashion – the user inputs the date and shift-type they can or can't work and will be notified with process success. This process doesn't fail unless an IO exception occurs when data is saved in the DB.